an English song - My Daddy - from Signor Corri's Scots Song Bk II

My daddy is gone to his grave my mother lies under a stone And never a penny we have a-las I am quite un- done My lodging is in the cold air and hunger es sharp and bitter it little fire good Sir spare to keep us warm at night

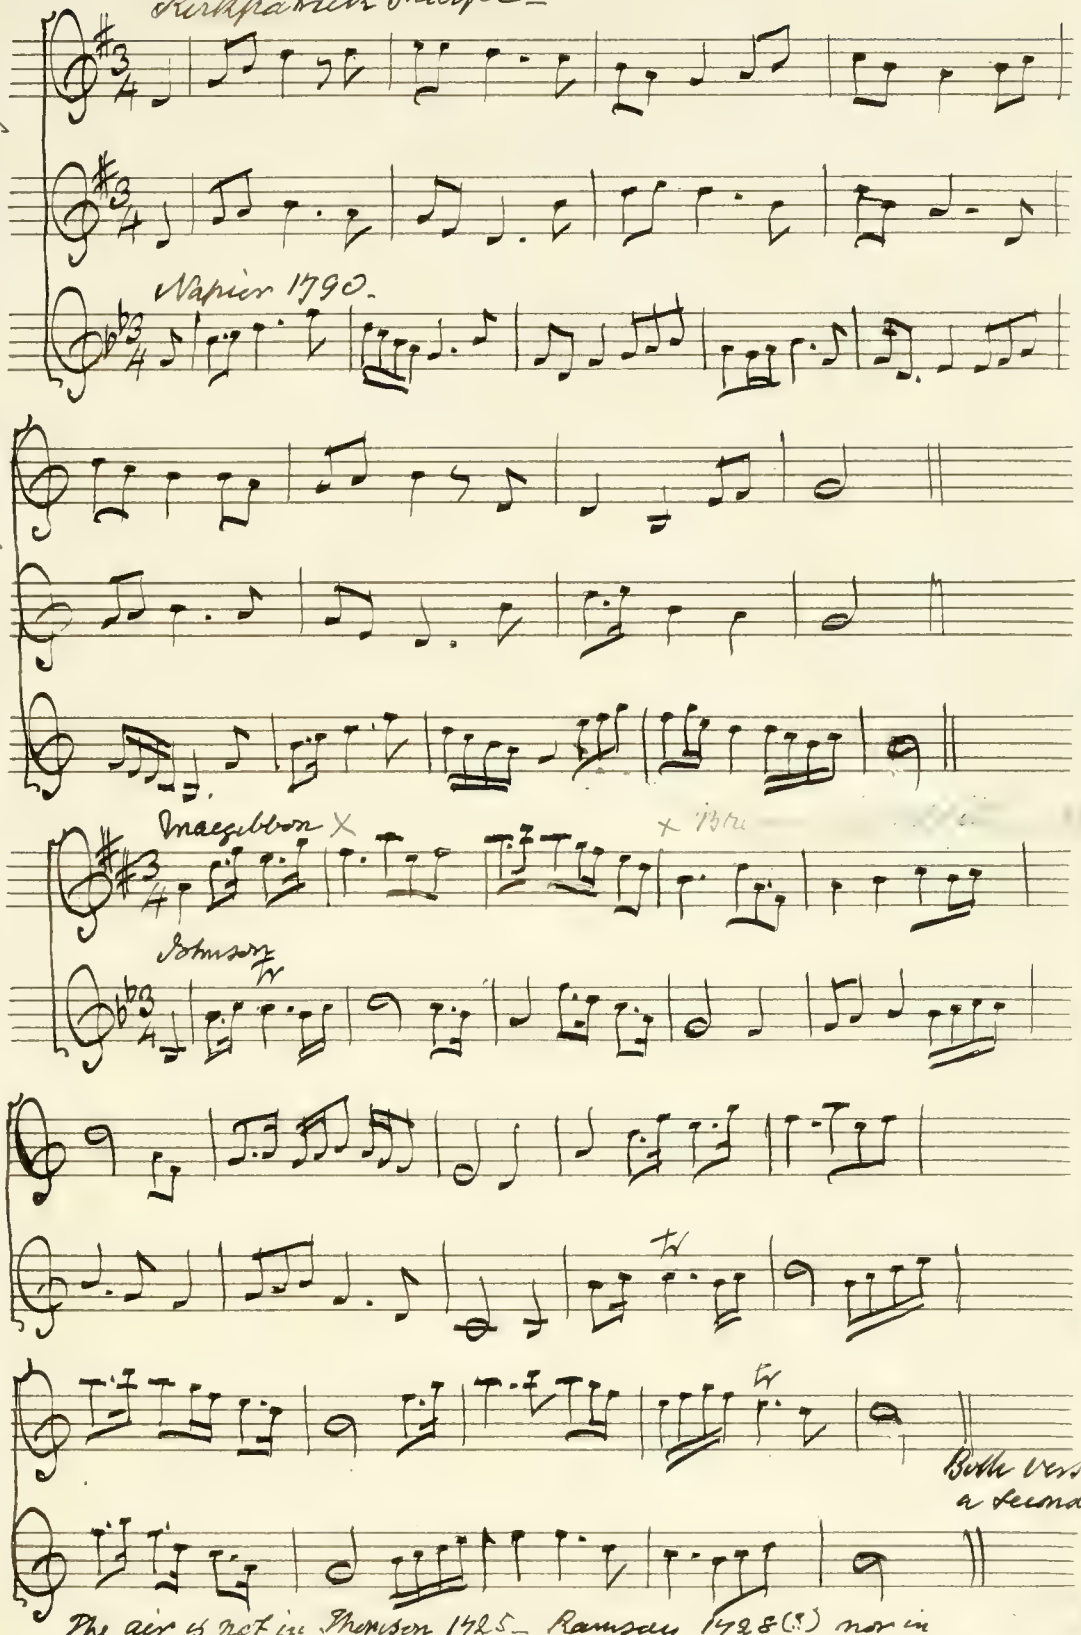
Where Helen lies –

Kirkpatrick Sharpe –



The first version is from Wood's Songs, Ms., as Skarstaed it sung in 1821; the substantially the same as that given by Skirvings, but without his drums, and converts his Tuplet 5 taken into correct rhythm of eight. The 8th is followed by Ritson, Thomson, and R. A. Smith – this is a second part made from the first.

Both versions have a second part.

These versions were probably taken down from a player on the flute or fiddle – They are instrumental –

The air is not in Thomson 1725 – Ramsay 1728(?) nor in Craig 1730 – It was probably brought into notice by Pennants Tour in Scotland 1775 – Air in Blaikie's Ms. 1692 –
